Hmm.. Lee Underwood wrote that Peanut Man was chosen by Judy and that Tim actually sings all the voices in that song.. which is pretty low, low low on some of those notes...

I can handle it though, it's a little bit of fun..

My enduring favourites are:

1. Troubadour
2. Danang

I have other favourites which seem to simmer for a while and then suddenly pop up to the surface. :)

Another one has just bubbled to the surface and I can't stop playing it:
Phantasmagoria in 2.
Its such a clever song. I love it. :)

That's a pretty tough selection but I'll have to go with these:
Phantasmagoria in Two
Love from Room 109 at The Islander
Buzzin' Fly
Happy Time
Because of You

Sefronia/King's Chain
Song to the Siren
Once I Was Hallucinations
Pleasant Street

No particular order on those, except to say that Phantaz is my all-time fave. I'll also add that honorable mentions would go to..

Song of the Magician
Aren't You the Girl
Sing a Song for You
I Must Have Been Blind
Blue Melody
I Never Asked to Be Your Mountain — though I'm a bit ambivalent about this one in that I really like the music but being a bigger Jeff fan, the lyrics bother me a little :/
Strange Street Affair Under Blue
Strange Feelin'

Well, I guess I've already got 8 out of the next 10 were we allowed to go to 20 instead. LOL I also guess that from looking at my selections it's easy to see I prefer Tim's earlier work overall.

Mojopin:

I think that I prefer Tim's earlier work also. Perhaps it is because I am a relative beginner and the earlier work is easier to catch on to?

Still working on my top ten.

Mojopin - are you a Jeff fan by any chance?

I dunno how I would choose, so many songs appeal to me on different days, can't get the dream letter version of morning glory out of my head today, yesterday it was I had a talk with my woman from live at the troubador.

I compiled a sampler for a friend who never heard any Buckley music. I only burned four songs:

1. Buzzin' fly
2. Blue Melody
3. Lorca
4. Song to the siren

I though this might be a good introduction to Tim Buckley. Do you agree?
